

Objective
Management
Group

James Sharkey

Covideo

February 27, 2026

Sales Insights

This analysis presents insights that explain how the ways you think and act may affect success in sales. Please keep in mind that areas for growth are sales-specific and not a critique of you as an individual. Acceptable sales values may differ significantly from your personal values, beliefs, and expectations.

There may be sales competencies that are not applicable to your current sales role, however you may find them helpful for future growth.

Remember, you are being compared to the top salespeople in the world. This analysis identifies the gaps you'll need to close to achieve world class sales performance also.

Core Competency Groups

OMG's Core Competencies are divided into three Competency Groups. Will to Sell measures an individual's sales-specific drive to succeed, Sales DNA measures the core underlying beliefs and actions that either support or limit sales success, and Tactical Competencies measure skills and abilities necessary throughout the sales lifecycle.

Will to Sell

- » Desire
- » Commitment
- » Outlook
- » Responsibility
- » Motivation

Sales DNA

- » Doesn't Need Approval
- » Stays in the Moment
- » Supportive Beliefs
- » Supportive Buy Cycle
- » Comfortable Discussing Money
- » Handles Rejection

Tactical

- » Hunting
- » Reaching Decision-Makers
- » Relationship Building
- » Consultative Selling
- » Selling Value
- » Qualifying
- » Presentation Approach
- » Closing
- » Sales Process
- » Sales Technology

Will to Sell

The Will to Sell Competencies measure a salesperson's overall drive to achieve success in sales. Without strong Will to Sell, it is difficult for an individual to change their habits or learn new skills.

When this is an Opportunity for Growth, an individual might...

When this is a Strength, an individual might...

Desire

tend to prioritize non-sales activities, lack urgency, or lack concern about sales results.

feel urgency to take action, prioritize sales results, or care deeply about achieving sales results.

Commitment

only do what it takes to ethically succeed in their role if certain personal or professional conditions are met.

do whatever it takes, ethically but without conditions, to be successful in their role.

Outlook

feel frustrated, demotivated, or distracted by their career prospects.

feel positive, focused, and appreciative about their career prospects.

Responsibility

rationalize poor sales results by pointing to the economy, the competition, or the company.

hold themselves accountable for any lack of sales results.

Motivation

not have a meaningful dream or goal to fuel the work they do to achieve sales success.

have a compelling dream or goal to drive sales performance.

DOESN'T NEED
APPROVALSTAYS IN THE
MOMENTSUPPORTIVE
BELIEFSSUPPORTIVE BUY
CYCLECOMFORTABLE
DISCUSSING MONEYHANDLES
REJECTION

Sales DNA

The Sales DNA Competencies measure a salesperson's beliefs and actions that support or limit success in sales. Salespeople are often unaware of how their biases can negatively impact their interactions with customers.

When this is an Opportunity for Growth, an individual might...

When this is a Strength, an individual might...

Doesn't Need Approval

avoid asking lots of questions or challenging the status quo, because they worry about upsetting their customer.

be able to ask tough questions and challenge their customers to earn their respect.

Stays in the Moment

find it difficult to capture what their prospects are saying because their self-talk captures their attention.

be able to remain objective and actively listen to their prospects and customers.

Supportive Beliefs

put constraints on their actions because of negative sales-specific self-talk.

feel empowered to take positive action without being sabotaged by negative sales-specific self-talk.

Supportive Buy Cycle

side with their prospect's objections to price, desire to comparison shop, or indecision because it is similar to how they buy.

be able to push back over price objections, competition, and indecision.

Comfortable Discussing Money

skip the conversation about purchase budget because they find it too uncomfortable.

lean into discussions about budget and/or how to find funding that isn't readily available.

Handles Rejection

feel hurt and hesitate for some period of time before reaching out to a prospect after being rejected.

get back on another sales call immediately after being rejected without feeling hurt.

Supportive Beliefs

OMG's research has found that high self-awareness is especially important for salespeople. Self-awareness helps you better understand the belief systems that you're consciously or unconsciously bringing into your sales calls. It also helps you understand how you might interpret a client's response to you.

Below we've listed some Self-Limiting Beliefs that your responses indicated you hold, along with the corresponding Supportive Beliefs that you can develop with training and coaching.

Self-Limiting Belief		Supportive Belief
I need to educate my prospects	»	I have the ability to limit how much my prospects conduct research
I have to work with the procurement department before I can call on end users or decision-makers	»	I have the ability to call on decision makers
Any lack of results is due to the economy or marketplace	»	Any lack of results is due to my own efforts

Tactical

Tactical Competencies measure the selling capabilities necessary to successfully find and guide potential customers through the sales process.

When this is an Opportunity for Growth, an individual might...

When this is a Strength, an individual might...

Hunting

prefer to wait for inbound leads before reaching out to prospects, and when there aren't enough, choose to not prospect.

proactively and consistently look for new business by reaching out to targeted prospects.

Reaching Decision-Makers

not push to reach a decision maker, as they are more comfortable continuing the conversation with their existing contact.

find a way to reach the person responsible for deciding to purchase the products or services offered, even at the risk of seeming "pushy".

Relationship Building

limit themselves to basic rapport and not establish a bond that helps them get or grow business.

develop a strong bond with a customer to the point that the customer refers them business or follows them to new companies.

Consultative Selling

present earlier in the sales process than is prudent, before learning about the prospect's problems, consequences, and reasons for buying from them.

uncover compelling reasons for prospects and customers to buy from them by using active listening skills to ask good, tough, and timely questions.

Selling Value

talk about their service's value without personally being part of the value, leading to a buying decision based on price.

position themselves as a trusted advisor and provide the customer with crucial solutions unavailable elsewhere.

Qualifying

tend to prematurely prepare a quote, proposal, or presentation.

ask about everything that could possibly derail an opportunity before determining that it is fully qualified.

Presentation Approach

be more focused on presenting the product or solution than considering the timing, specific topics, or who should be in attendance.

be very thoughtful about what to present, when to present, and to whom it should be presented.

Closing

tend to accept stalling, and work to close the business through their follow-up efforts.

get a verbal agreement in advance of the expected closing call or meeting, and be certain of getting a decision.

Sales Process

proceed through a sales process based on how they think things are going and what they think they need to do next.

have a formal, staged, milestone-centric sales process that provides repeatable, predictable results.

Sales Technology

not be proficient with CRM, ignore LinkedIn, and choose face-to-face meetings over video.

be a daily user of CRM, frequent user of LinkedIn, and a regular user of video for sales calls and meetings.

Hunting

The Hunting Competency measures an individual's capabilities for finding new business opportunities, including the Sales DNA that should support those efforts.

Will Prospect

Your willingness to prospect for new business is the single most important driver that would lead to enough prospecting to maintain the required pipeline.

Prospects Consistently

You understand the importance of prospecting on a regular basis in order to keep your pipeline full.

Prospects via Phone and / or Walk-ins

You indicated that you are comfortable making "cold calls" (where the prospective customer doesn't know you).

Has No Need for Approval

While hunting for new business, you are able to stay objective about negative interactions with prospects.

Schedules Meetings

You indicated that you are generally able to get meetings with prospects, giving you a great start to filling your pipeline.

Recovers from Rejection

Your ability to handle rejection allows you to swiftly move on from one opportunity to the next without needing time to recover or becoming emotionally drained.

Maintains Full Pipeline

You understand the importance of maintaining a full pipeline when hunting for new opportunities.

Not a Perfectionist or it Does Not Prevent Prospecting

You don't let your perfectionism delay opportunities.

Believes They Are Quickly Liked by Customers

You indicated that you don't always feel like customers quickly like you. Accelerating how long it takes for customers to warm to you can open the door to more engagement.

Reaches Target Prospect

You have developed the ability to get beyond gatekeepers and waste little time in the process, allowing you to discover more opportunities.

Gets Referrals from Customers / Network

You indicated you regularly receive referrals and introductions from existing customers.

Uses Social Selling Tools

You may find that by developing your skills related to social selling tools, you can unlock new channels to discover opportunities.

Attends Networking Events

You indicated that you attend networking events and are able to use them as a means of discovering additional opportunities.

Reaching Decision-Makers

The Reaching Decision-Makers Competency measures an individual's ability to reach and meet with the actual decision-makers.

Calling on Actual Decision Maker

By speaking more often with the actual decision maker you may find that you are able to uncover the real problems, discover the actual budget, learn what it will take to win the business, and shorten the sales cycle.

Believes Speaking with Decision Makers Is Required

You understand the importance of having a conversation with the decision-maker, giving you an advantage over salespeople who do not.

Reaching Decision Maker Is Milestone in Sales Process

You indicated that reaching the decision maker is a milestone in the sale process you use or are most comfortable with.

Does Not Need to be Liked

Your strength in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency helps you push prospects to put you in touch with the actual decision maker.

Doesn't Begin Sales Process with Procurement

Your responses indicate that you often start your sales process with purchasing agents or intermediaries, rather than decision makers who have problems you can solve.

Uses Selling Skills to Reach Decision Maker

By learning additional strategies and tactics to reach decision makers, you will be able to better uncover compelling reasons they would buy from you.

Navigates Stakeholders Effectively

You understand the necessity of adapting your sales approach when selling to multiple stakeholders who might have different needs and priorities.

Relationship Building

The Relationship Building Competency measures an individual's ability to quickly begin, nurture, and develop strong relationships over time.

Quickly Develops Rapport

Your ability to quickly develop rapport during the first conversation helps prospects feel more comfortable with you.

Relationship Is Key Factor in Winning Business

You indicated that you sell in an industry where relationships are the key factor in getting, maintaining, and growing business. This places extra importance on your mastery of building relationships.

Relationships Generate New Business

You have been able to build the kind of relationships that generate referrals and introductions that convert to business.

Develops Strong Relationships over Time

You are able to develop strong rapport, and also have long-term ongoing relationships with customers.

Customers Follow to New Companies

You indicated that you have had past customer relationships strong enough that the customer has followed you to a new job.

Believes That Making Friends Is Single Greatest Asset

You indicated that making friends with prospects and customers is the single most important thing you do. This can make it easier for you to build relationships.

Extroversion Supports Relationship Building

Your self-indicated tendency to be extroverted can be a supportive factor in building strong relationships.

Consultative Selling

The Consultative Selling Competency measures to what degree an individual has developed the ability to actively listen and ask an appropriate number of relevant, challenging, and timely questions to uncover a prospect's compelling reasons to buy.

Able to Stay in the Moment

When a prospect catches you by surprise or raises an objection, you may find yourself worrying or preparing a rebuttal. This can cause you to lose objectivity and control of the conversation.

Uncovers Reasons to Buy

You may be either making assumptions about why your prospect would buy from you or telling them why they should buy from you.

Reasons to Buy Are Compelling

You are able to uncover truly compelling reasons that might cause your customer to act quickly.

Able to Listen/Ask with Ease

You do a great job listening to your customers and avoid dominating the conversation.

Asks Enough Questions

You understand the importance of not dominating the conversation. Asking lots of questions gives prospects an opportunity to share their concerns, opinions, frustrations, problems, and budget.

Asks Great Questions

Your ability to ask great questions helps you uncover important information, differentiates you from your competition and shortens the sales process.

	Gets Prospects Past "Nice to Have"	You are able to get prospects to view what you are selling as something they MUST HAVE , as opposed to something that is nice to have.
	Will Build Trust	Your strength in the Building Trust Competency also supports your ability to sell consultatively, as prospects will share more with someone they trust.
	Able to Ask Tough Questions	Your strength in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency supports your ability to ask tough questions, have meaningful conversations, and differentiate yourself from other salespeople.
	Takes Nothing for Granted	Your responses show that you act on hunches, which may cause you to miss opportunities to discover more about a prospect's needs.
	Manages Appropriate Amount of Patience	You exhibit an appropriate amount of patience while selling consultatively, not being too impatient to appear pushy and not being too patient to accept delays.
	Understands How Prospects Will Buy	You are able to get prospects to share with you how they will reach a decision to buy from you.
	Develops Strong Relationships	Your strong skills in the Relationship Building Competency help you sell consultatively.
	Presenting at Appropriate Times	Your responses show that you have good intuition for when to present and when to have a two-way conversation with a customer.

Healthy Skepticism

You are not overly trusting of your prospects, allowing you to get more accurate answers to tough questions.

Selling Value

The Selling Value Competency measures an individual's capabilities for selling value instead of focusing on price.

Focused on Value over Price

Your tendency not to shop around for the best price helps you avoid being sympathetic to prospects who want to compare your price with competitors. In doing so, you are able to better keep the conversation on value as opposed to price.

Will Discuss Finances

Your comfort discussing finances allows you to have in-depth conversations to determine exactly how much your prospect will spend and navigate challenging budget issues.

High Threshold for Money

Your high threshold for money prevents you from being sympathetic to prospects and customers when they push back on the cost of what you are selling.

Attempts to Sell Value

Your tendency to hold firm when a prospect asks for a lower price helps you keep the focus of conversations on value as opposed to price.

Sales Process Supports Selling Value

Your sales process consists of the important milestones that support identifying value opportunities for your prospects.

Learns Why Prospects Will Buy

By asking prospects why they would buy, as opposed to making assumptions or telling them why they should by, you will be able to more easily keep the conversation on those reasons instead of price.

Doesn't Need Approval

Your strength in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency helps you push back when a prospect is focused more on price than value.

Asks Great Questions

You ask great questions that uncover insights that help you find ways to sell on value over price.

Asks Enough Questions

Your tendency to ask lots of questions will help you uncover opportunities to help prospects focus on the value of your solution as opposed to the price.

Avoids Making Assumptions

Your responses show you sometimes act on hunches, which may cause you to miss opportunities to sell on value over price.

Quickly Develops Rapport

You are able to quickly develop rapport with prospects, which helps you steer conversations with prospects away from price and keep the focus on value.

Not Compelled to Quote

By being careful to only create quotes or proposals when you know you are going to win the business, you are able to avoid inadvertently shifting the focus to price when it should be on value.

Qualifying

The Qualifying Competency measures how thoroughly and effectively an individual qualifies their prospect's ability to buy from them, assuring more accurate forecasts.

Meets with Decision Maker

Your areas of growth in the Reaching Decision-Makers Competency also negatively impact the ability to fully qualify opportunities.

Uncovers Actual Budget

Your answers show that you have been successful at getting prospects to share how much money they can spend, allowing you to properly qualify the opportunity.

Will Discuss Finances

You are comfortable talking about money with prospects, which is critical to determining whether an opportunity is qualified to move forward in the sales process.

Knows Decision-Making Process

You are able to successfully get prospects to disclose the process they will use to decide whether to buy from you.

Can Influence the Decision-Making Process

Your responses show that you may struggle to change a customer's unfavorable or complex decision-making process.

Handles High-Ticket Pricing OK

You are comfortable handling customers' objections to a solution costing a lot of money.

Need to Be Liked Doesn't Get in the Way

Your strength in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency helps you hold your ground on fully qualifying opportunities before moving them forward in the sales process.

Able to Stay in the Moment

Your answers indicate that your emotional connection to opportunities tend to cloud your ability to properly and objectively qualify them.

Self-Limiting Beliefs Won't be an Obstacle

Your Supportive Beliefs help ensure that you are objectively qualifying opportunities.

Knows Why They Would Buy

When asking customers about the reasons they would want to buy your solution, keep digging to ensure the reasons they give you are truly compelling to them.

Asks about Everything

Your responses show that you tend to act on hunches while qualifying opportunities.

Not Vulnerable to Competition

A strength in your personal Buy Cycle is that you don't tend to comparison shop. This ensures that when a prospect wants to comparison shop, you are more likely to push back.

Presentation Approach

The Presentation Approach Competency measures to what degree an individual presents the right content, at the right time, to the right people, and for the right reasons.

Emphasizes Listening over Talking

Your ability to listen more than you talk serves you well during presentations, when prospects may reveal additional details about the opportunity.

Able to Minimize Talking about Company Products or Solutions

You spend more time asking questions than talking about your company and what you are selling. This keeps presentations interesting and tailored to your prospect.

Not Compelled to Present

You have a practical view on the importance of presenting, allowing you to avoid presenting when it is not required.

Not Overly Reliant on Educating and Presenting

You are able to balance presenting with other sales skills such as asking challenging questions and qualifying.

Does Not Believe Presenting Equates to Controlling the Sales Process

You indicated that you don't need to be presenting to feel in control of the selling process.

Does Not Believe Making A Proposal is the Most Important Part of the Sales Process

You appropriately feel that making a proposal is less important than other aspects of the sales process such as selling consultatively and qualifying the opportunity.

Not Compelled to Propose or Quote

You have a healthy outlook on when it is acceptable to create proposals or quotes, and are likely presenting at an appropriate time in the sales process.

Asks Enough Questions

You understand the importance of not dominating the conversation during sales calls. While presenting your solutions, this same attribute can help you find opportunities to learn more about your customer's needs.

Takes Nothing for Granted

Basing your presentation on assumptions or hunches runs the risk of delivering a proposal that doesn't truly fit your prospect's needs.

Closing

The Closing Competency measures an individual's ability to get commitments and decisions when an opportunity becomes closable.

Gets Prospect to Agree to Make a Decision

You successfully get your prospects to agree when decision-making will take place, allowing you to shorten your sales cycle and ensuring presentations and proposals are accompanied by a decision.

Not Likely to Take "Think it Overs"

A positive aspect of your Buy Cycle is that you don't tend to mull over purchases. This makes it easier for you to push back when prospects ask for time to think over their purchase.

Unlikely to be Derailed by Put-Offs

You are able to successfully avoid prospect's stalls, focusing instead on tangible next steps and decisions.

Manages Appropriate Amount of Patience

You exhibit an appropriate amount of patience at closing time, not being too impatient to appear pushy and not being too patient to accept delays.

Closing Urgency

You appropriately push back when your prospect asks you to follow up later about a final purchasing decision.

Sales Assertiveness

You exhibit an appropriate amount of assertiveness with customers, being neither too timid nor too overconfident.

Won't Make Inappropriate Quotes

You have a good perspective on quotes and proposals, only generating them when you are likely to win the business.

Problem Solver

You tend to think of solutions, as opposed to worrying about problems or getting consumed by them.

Reaching Decision-Makers

Developing your skills in the Reaching Decision Makers Competency can help ensure that at the time of closing you have access to the final decision makers.

Doesn't Need Approval

Your strength in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency helps you push deals over the finish line.

Stays in the Moment

You may, at times, find your emotion connection to deals clouding your ability to remain objective when trying to close an opportunity.

Seeks Win/Win

You tend to find "win/win" outcomes while negotiating, where both you and the customer get something they want.

Will Find a Way to Close

You consistently get your prospects to agree to make a decision before trying to close the opportunity.

Sales Process

The Sales Process Competency measures an individual's ability to follow the proper sequence of stages and milestones of a structured sales process.

Follows Stages and Steps

The sales process you follow or are most comfortable with does not include appropriate stages or steps.

Process Has Most Key Milestones

The sales process you indicated you follow has the key milestones necessary to be effective.

Process Has Adequate Sequence

The sales process you follow or are most comfortable with lacks an effective sequence of activities.

Consistent and Effective Results

You indicated that your sales process usually produces consistent and effective results.

Little Wasted Time

You may be spending too much time with prospects that don't buy from you, which is likely the result of not following a strong sales process.

Has and/or Follows an Effective Process

The sales process you follow or are most comfortable with would generally be considered a true sales process as opposed to a series of activities.

Uses an Effective Approach

The sales process you follow or are most comfortable with is likely to help to lead predictable sales results.

Relationship-Based

Your strength in the Relationship Building Competency will help you when your sales process requires building a strong relationship with prospects in order to win the business.

CRM Savvy

Your strong CRM skills support your adherence to a structured sales process.

Strategic Use of Sales Scorecard

You indicated that you regularly use a scorecard that predicts the likelihood of winning business as part of qualifying prospects.

Sales Technology

The Sales Technology Competency measures an individual's willingness and ability to successfully adapt sales technology into their process, including CRM, social media, and generative AI tools.

	CRM Savvy	You have experience with CRM and embrace it as a necessary part of sales success.
	Social Selling	Your responses indicate that you lack the experience to effectively use social media tools or the passion to use it for business development purposes.
	Video Proficient	You have the skills and passion necessary to effectively sell to customers via video.

Other

These Competencies measure capabilities that may not apply to all selling roles and salespeople. The importance of these competencies depends on the salesperson's role.

When this is an Opportunity for Growth, an individual might...

When this is a Strength, an individual might...

Sales Posturing

appear to lack authority or make a negative first impression.

make a good first impression by being positive, confident, and memorable.

Negotiating

attempt to persuade customers for a short time and then agree with their customer's demands.

be willing to walk away, ask questions, and seek a win-win outcome.

Building Trust

have integrity but behave in a way that causes customers to become defensive.

be viewed by prospects and customers as authentic, reliable, and accountable.

Account Management

take their customers for granted, and/or be content with incremental account growth actively service the account, proactively solve problems, and nurture the customer relationship to maintain that account's business.

Farming

have relationships that aren't strong enough to leverage for an increase in a customer's revenue.

leverage their good relationships with stakeholders at a customer to achieve account growth.

Sales Posturing

The Sales Posturing Competency measures an individual's ability to make positive first impressions, differentiate themselves, and be memorable.

Good Self-Image

Your strong self-image helps to maintain a sense of being rejection-proof and makes you memorable relative to competitors.

Quickly Develops Rapport

You are generally able to build rapport on or during your first meeting with a prospect.

Sales Optimism

Your responses show that you tend to not expect positive outcomes from selling situations, which could negatively impact prospect's perception of you.

Sales Assertiveness

You exhibit an appropriate amount of assertiveness with customers, being neither too timid nor too overconfident.

Sales Empathy

It is important to empathize with a prospect's problems without also empathizing with their stalls or objections.

Appropriate Amount of Patience

You exhibit an appropriate amount of patience with prospects and customers, not being too impatient to appear pushy and not being too patient to accept stalling tactics, leaving them with a good impression of you.

Will Build Trust

Your strength in the Building Trust Competency helps you be memorable and make a lasting impression.

Good Listener

During conversations, you listen far more than you talk, which helps customers feel understood and positively differentiates you.

Healthy Skepticism

You are not overly trusting of prospects, which makes you more comfortable asking questions, making you more memorable.

Negotiating

The Negotiating Competency measures an individual's ability to effectively negotiate terms, prices, and conditions throughout the sales process.

	Seeks Win/Win	You tend to find "win/win" outcomes while negotiating, where both you and the customer get something they want.
	Willing to Walk	You are willing to walk away from negotiations if they are not going well, which is an important strategy.
	Manages Appropriate Amount of Patience	You exhibit an appropriate amount of patience while negotiating, not being too impatient to appear pushy and not being too patient to accept stalling tactics.
	Able to Listen/Ask with Ease	You know the value of listening more than talking, which helps you uncover advantages during a negotiation.
	Able to Stay in the Moment	Your emotional connection to opportunities may at times cloud your ability to successfully negotiate.
	Goal Oriented	Your strong organizational tendencies in your personal goal management also help you with the organizational skills necessary to successfully negotiate complex situations.
	Problem Solver	You tend to think of solutions, as opposed to worrying about problems or getting consumed by them.

Doesn't Need to be Liked

You are willing to accept that a negotiation may negatively impact how much a customer likes you.

Rejection Proof

Your ability to swiftly recover from rejection allows you to respond swiftly during negotiations.

Selling Value

Your strength in the Selling Value Competency helps you identify positive outcomes in negotiations.

Will Discuss Finances

You have the ability to discuss money with a great deal of ease. This allows you to negotiate aspects of an opportunity related to money or challenge a prospect's money-related pushback.

Building Trust

The Building Trust Competency measures whether an individual is seen as trustworthy by their customers and prospects.

Gains Trust Early

You believe you are able to get your prospects to trust you early in your conversations, helping establish your credibility.

High Integrity Seller

When faced with a difficult business decision, you tend to choose a great opportunity over honoring an existing commitment, which can run the risk of undermining customer trust.

Customers Share Information Early

Customers tend to share information with you early in the sales process, opening the door to take a consultative approach.

Gets First Call from Customers

Your customers tend to consult or include you early in the planning process, suggesting they are more inclined to give you their business.

Quickly Develops Rapport

You indicated that you are generally able to build rapport on your first call/meeting, which supports your ability to quickly build trust.

Believes They Are Quickly Liked by Customers

You indicated that customers may not quickly like you or you may not quickly develop rapport. Working on building these quick connections will also help customers quickly trust you.

Account Management

The Account Management Competency measures an individual's ability to manage, maintain, and grow multiple assigned accounts.

Has Strong Relationships

Your strong abilities in the Relationship Building Competency also support your ability to form the long-running relationships necessary to be an effective account manager.

Will Handle Organizational Politics

When a customer exhibits unpredictable behavior, you try to discover why instead of making assumptions. This same curiosity can also help you uncover hidden opportunities and overcome obstacles.

Will Make Friends Everywhere

You don't generally prioritize customers being your friend and/or liking you. This serves you well in other areas of sales but isn't always supportive for longer account management relationships.

Will Follow Up Often

Your tendency to follow up often with customers helps ensure that they will view you as a trusted resource and provides you with more opportunities to develop additional opportunities.

Will Meet/Talk with Decision Makers

Developing your skills in the Reaching Decision Makers Competency can also help an account manager improve their ability to move beyond their usual contact to the actual decision maker when needed.

Will Know the Real Budgets

You are able to get your customers to share their budget with you, which can help an account manager uncover additional opportunities.

Won't Feel Urgency to Close Business

While pushing customers to make a decision is usually important in sales, it is less important in account management and could alienate your customers.

Won't Alienate People

You scored highly in the Doesn't Need Approval Competency. While this is helpful in most areas of sales, it can run the risk of alienating customers when you are seen as their go-to account manager.

Will Focus on Current Accounts Rather than Looking for New Accounts

As indicated in the Hunting Competency, you are strongly driven to hunt for new customers. To be successful in account management, you may need to reprioritize your focus on managing existing customers.

Will Manage Time Effectively

By developing your organizational skills further, you will also be able to be a more effective account manager.

Farming

The Farming Competency measures an individual's ability to grow a small number of key accounts.

Attempts to Close

You place tremendous importance on getting a customer to agree to make a decision, and you consistently get customers to agree to make a decision before trying to close.

Has Closing Urgency

If your customer asks you to follow up about a decision later, you appropriately push back to discover why.

Won't "Understand" Most Objections

The way you make purchases in your personal life is likely to help you avoid sympathizing with their objections.

Won't Panic Over Objections

When a customer catches you by surprise with an objection, you may fail to stay in the moment, which can lead to worrying about the objection as opposed to objectively addressing it.

Handles "It's a Lot of Money" Objection

You have a healthy perspective on value that allows you to respond appropriately when a customer objects to something costing a lot.

Won't Accept Put Offs

You are able to successfully avoid put offs when scheduling a meeting with your existing customers or trying to close an opportunity.

Believes They Are Quickly Liked by Customers

You indicated that customers may not quickly like you or you may not quickly develop rapport. Working on building these quick connections will also help you gain more business from existing customers.

Won't Alienate Customers

Your ability to swiftly recover from rejection and move on to other opportunities can run the risk of alienating customers when your role is growing a small number of key accounts.

Unlikely to be Distracted by New Accounts

Your enjoyment of hunting for new customers could cause you to lose focus on getting more business from existing customers.

We hope this analysis has given you useful insights into your current sales-related skills and strengths – both the areas where you are already strongly competent as well as any areas in which you could benefit from training and development.